From the United States Gazette.

OUR FOREIGN RELATIONS.

We are quite at a loss to conjecture for what reason the Aurora and American Citizen are at this particular time so very anxious for an alliance offensive and defensive between this country and France, and for a war with Great Britain. The American Citizen thinks that nothing short of Bonaparte's legions can put the politics of this country to rights, and therefore hopes soon to see them patrolling the streets of the city of N. York.

The Aurora says that "England will not do us justice or any thing like justice."—The inference is drawn in the following words:—"As in 1765 and 1774, by our present partial non-importation act, America has once more put her hands to the plough. We persevered then, and success, liberty, and independence, rewarded our courage and constancy.—The measures now on the verge of execution must be enforced and followed up.—Britain must be treated as you would parly with an assassin of any kind." "We hope that the administration and congress will act at the moment of meeting of the next session if ample indemnity for the past and security for the future be not by that time given—as if no negotiation was pending—that is to stop all importation. Let Americans act once more as in 1775, &c. &c.

Such are the sentiments held forth in the Aurora. By some extracts which we this day make from the Citizen, it will be seen that as to France and Spain the democrats think we have no cause of complaint whatever, though every mail brings accounts of encroachments which they are making upon our territory, and insults of every description offered to our government and nation. The president himself has told us officially that Spain pertinaciously refuses all indemnity for spoiliations as well as all amicable adjustment of disputes respecting boundaries. Yet against France and Spain, say our patriotic democrats, we need no defence but principle. England, on the contrary, has never refused to make us the most honorable and ample compensation for spoiliations committed by her subjects, and is now, as the government paper at Washington informs us, in a train of negotiation which promises speedily to terminate in the most satisfactory manner.—No matter for that, says the Aurora; "England will not do us justice or any thing like justice," and congress ought therefore "to act as if no negotiation was pending."—"Let Americans," he exclaims, "act once more as in 1775"—that is, take up arms and go to war!

Those who know the defenceless state of our country will perceive that this is in perfect unison with the Citizen's wish that two or three thousand French troops would come and scour New-York and banish the scoundrels that infest it—that is, the native inhabitants. We have lately heard that Turreau, the French minister, had applied a considerable sum of money to the establishment of a French paper in New-York. By the complexion which the Citizen and Aurora have recently assumed, I suspect that he now directs his payments to a different purpose than that of establishing a new French paper.

Alliance offensive and defensive with Great Britain.—On this important subject which has been lately brought up before the public, we cannot enforce the opinion we hold and have more than once expressed, in any way so well, as by presenting the following impressive extract from the farewell address of Washington:

"The great rule of conduct for us, in regard to foreign nations, is in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connexion as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop. Europe has a set of primary interests, which to us have none or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics, or the ordinary combinations and collusions of her friendship or enmities. Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. "If we remain one people, under an efficient government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality we may at any time resolve upon, to be scrupulously respected; when belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not lightly hazard the giving us provocation; when we may choose peace or war, as our interest, guided by justice, shall counsel. Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalry, interest, humors, or caprice? 'Tis our true policy to steer clear of PERMANENT ALLIANCES with any portion of the foreign world." in these salutary counsels we implicitly acquiesce.

THE HUNGRY ARAB.

A Tale from the Tahfet al Mojallis.

An Arab, who was travelling through the desert, was almost exhausted with hunger and thirst, when he unexpectedly perceived a man who had spread his cloak upon the ground and was taking his repast with an excellent appetite. The Arab saluted him, according to custom, and sat down beside him. "Whence comest thou?" asked the stranger. "From the village," replied the famished Arab, hoping that he should be invited to partake. "Hast thou seen my house?" continued the former. "Yes," answered the Arab; "it is beautiful and magnificent; its roof reaches to the sky, and its court is delightful as the plains of Paradise."

Hast thou seen my shepherd's dog? O, yes! He watches thy herds and thy flocks with such vigilance that not a wolf dares to approach them.

Hast thou seen my son Chahid? Yes, he was at school, and was reading to his master in the koran with great fluency, and in a most impressive tone.

How is Chahid's mother? As well as thou canst wish; and there is not a creature, either male or female, in all Arabia, who manages a house better, or can weave more skillfully, or bears a higher character for mildness and benevolence.

Hast thou also seen my camel, that carries out water?

Yes; it is in the best condition. The man hearing all this welcome intelligence concerning his wife, his son, and his property, was so rejoiced that he began to eat with still greater appetite, but offered the languishing Arab not a single morsel. This unfortunate wretch, tormented with the pangs of hunger, was now ashamed of his flattery, and said to himself, "I must attack this covetous and insatiable fellow in another way." At this moment a dog came up; slured by the smell of the victuals, he stood still and wagged his tail.

"Yes," said the hungry Arab, "if thy dog were still alive, he would have wagged his tail exactly in the same manner." "Alas!" exclaimed the man, "is my dog dead? How did he perish?"

By drinking the blood of thy camel!—said the Arab.

What! did my Camel die too? No, replied the Arab, they killed it for the funeral dinner of Chahid's mother.

O, heavens! Is Chahid's mother dead? Yes, answered the Arab.

Of what disorder did she die? Of what disorder? She struck her head with such violence against Chahid's tomb, that she died of the wound.

What! My son dead too?

A violent earthquake demolished thy house, said the Arab, and he was buried beneath the ruins.

Grief and horror at this melancholy intelligence, deprived the stranger of his appetite; he ceased to eat, rose from his repast, left his provisions behind him, and hastened home with all possible dispatch, while the hungry Arab eat down and regaled himself.

Continuation of late Foreign Advice.

PARIS, [Saturday] Sept. 6.

Full Powers of M. D'Oubril.

We Alexander 1st, emperor and autocrat of all the Russias, &c. (Here follow all the titles of his majesty.)

Having a continual solicitude for the preservation of calm and tranquility in Europe, and being moved by a sincere desire to put an end to misunderstanding and to re-establish good harmony with France on a solid basis, we have thought proper to commit all this care to a person enjoying our confidence. For this purpose we have chosen, named and authorized our beloved and faithful Peter Oubril, our counsellor of state and chevalier of the orders of St. Vladimir of the third class, of Saint Ann of the second and of St. John of Jerusalem, and we chose, appoint and authorize him by these presents, for the purpose of attaining that end, to enter into conferences with him or those who shall be sufficiently authorized for that purpose by the French government, to conclude and sign with them an act or convention, on bases proper to secure the peace which shall be established between Russia and France, as also to prepare it between the other belligerent powers of Europe.

We promise on our imperial word, to hold good, and faithfully to execute every thing which shall be settled and signed by our said plenipotentiary; as also to give our imperial ratification within the promised term.

In faith whereof we have signed this full power and have sealed it with the seal of our empire.

Given at St. Petersburg the 30th April, 1806, and of our reign the 6th year.

Signed, ALEXANDER. Countersigned, Prince Adam Czartoryski. Certified to be a translation conformable to the original.

PIERRE D'OUBRIL.

[Moniteur.

The emperor went on Monday last to visit the camp of Meudon: His majesty arrived there in a Landau, at 11 o'clock, in company with general Junot, his first aid-de-camp, and governor of Paris. The news of the emperor's arrival was soon spread throughout the neighborhood, whence the inhabitants rushed forth to enjoy his majesty's presence, their number became so great, that it was necessary to forbid them entering the camp. The emperor alighted at his marquee, where he rested some time, & afterwards went out surrounded by his general officers. The troops who had been in waiting for him for several days, and who were then all drawn up under arms, in order to execute the grand evolutions under the orders of their commandants, perceiving his majesty a little way off, saluted him with cries from all parts of "Long live the Emperor!" placing at the same time their helmets on the point of their bayonets. The emperor reviewed these troops consisting of 15000 men, both infantry and cavalry. A detachment of picked gendarmes arrived and joined the cavalry of the camp.

These troops, led into the plain which extends between Clamart and le Plessis, were divided into twelve platoons, half of which were opposed to the other. They represented, under the immediate command of his majesty, a sham battle of Austerlitz. These manoeuvres lasted much longer than those which produced the great victory that put an end to the war. They began at 12 o'clock and were not over before 5 in the evening. The visitors, whom the noise of the musketry had brought from the neighboring country, were mounted on eminencies beyond the camp, and followed with their eyes every motion of the emperor, who was only to be distinguished by simplicity of his dress, and the swiftness of his course, when to give orders for a counter-march, he outdressed the generals who attended him. The emperor went throughout the whole of the camp, attentively examined its position, even visited the tents of the soldiers, gave orders for the form of the camp to be changed, returned afterwards to his marquee, changed his dress, and then returned to St. Cloud in the same Landau he came in.

On the following morning all the troops were in motion in order to execute the orders of his majesty for changing the arrangement of the camp. All that part of it which extended to the right on the plain of Veglies, now falls back towards le Plessis. The three squadrons of dragoons will form part of the camp, which will be of a square form. The emperor's marquee is to be placed in the centre—that of prince Borghese, governor of the camp, appears as if it were to remain in its present position. It is remarkable for its height, for the shrubs and verdure which surround it, for the wood barracks serving as kitchens, and above all for the marquees of the general officers which surround it.

Prince Borghese, governor of the camp, assembled the next day in his marquee all the colonels, and gave them a most sumptuous dinner.

We spoke some time ago of the conservative senate having held a sitting on the 14th August last. The following is the text of the senatus consultum framed in that sitting:

Art. I. The principality of Guastalla having been, with the authorization of his majesty the emperor and king, ceded to the kingdom of Italy, it shall be purchased from the produce of this session, and in lieu of estates within the territory of the French empire.

II. These estates shall be possessed by her imperial highness princess Pauline, prince Borghese, her consort, and the descendants born of their marriage, from male to male, as to hereditary and reversibility, quit of all charges, in the same manner as the said principality, and at the same charges and conditions, conformably to the act of the 30th of March last.

III. In case his majesty should authorize the change or alteration of the estates composing the endowment of the duchies dependent on the French empire, created by the acts of the same day, 30th March last, or the endowment of any new duchies or other titles which his majesty may create in future, there shall be purchased estates in lieu of them within the territory of the French empire, with the price of the alienations.

IV. The estates taken in exchange or purchased shall be possessed, as to hereditary and reversibility, quit of all charges, conformably to the acts of creation of the said duchies or other titles, and to the charges and conditions therein expressed.

V. Whenever his majesty shall judge proper, either to reward great services, or to excite an useful emulation, or to add to the lustre of the throne, he may authorize a head of a family to substitute his freehold estates to form the endowment of an hereditary title which his majesty may create in his favor, reversible upon his eldest son, born or to be born, and to his descendants in a direct line, from male to male, by order of primogeniture.

VI. The property thus possessed upon the French territory, conformable to the preceding articles, will have and will confer no right or privilege relative to the other French subjects of his majesty, and to their property.

VII. The acts by which his majesty may authorize a head of a family to substitute his freehold estates, as expressed in the preceding articles, or may permit the placing in France of the endowments of the duchies dependent on the empire or any other title which his majesty may create in future, shall be communicated to the senate, and transcribed in its register.

Some travellers lately come from Russia announce that from St. Petersburg to Russian Poland, there are different camps of troops, and that many magazines have been established along the road.

Letters from Dresden announce that several circles of the electorate of Saxony have demanded the establishment of the provincial militia, and that the ministers are settling a plan for this purpose. The present period is highly favorable to this plan; for the stagnation in most of the manufactures in Saxony, has left a considerable number of workmen only the resource of military service.

NAPLES, Aug. 17.

The chiefs of the conspiracy which tended to nothing less than to murder all the friends of the French, were arrested the very night their plot was to have been put into execution; to wit, the Reverend Father Anthony de Cutro, a Franciscan friar; Pirantonio Mellica, Andrew Solla, and Michael Albanese.

Their whole correspondence and the other proofs of their horrible scheme were seized upon them. Upon being tried before the Military commission of Castel Nuovo, they were found guilty and condemned to death on the 11th instant.—This sentence was executed the next day.

VENICE, Aug. 23.

Letters from Dalmatia of a recent date, announce that the French plenipotentiaries, the Russian admiral and the Austrian general are arrived at the mouths of the Cattaro, to carry into execution the article of the treaty of Presburgh which stipulates that that place shall be delivered up to the French. One of these letters adds, that the Russian admiral declared that the orders he had received from his court were so positive, that he could deliver up the place without the intervention of an Austrian general. Be this as it may, we may look upon Cattaro as already delivered up; and official intelligence is hourly expected.

General Marmont is arrived at Ragusa with two regiments; he has given two lectures in the town on account of peace being signed between the French empire and Russia.

GRIEFSWALD, Aug. 23.

Mr. Merlio, aid-de-camp to the king, was sent ere yesterday to Berlin with dispatches. The Swedish ships have received orders, it has been said, to raise the blockade of the Prussian ports, but however without quitting their respective stations. Six squadrons of hussars and two battalions of artillery, under the command of general count Lowenhielm, are on their route for Lauenburg, which by this time must be evacuated by the Prussian troops.

BY THIS DAY'S MAIL.

NEW-YORK, October 23.

The following proclamations of general Miranda, the one published on his leaving Coro, and the other on his arrival at Aruba, have been handed to us for insertion in the Commercial Advertiser.

PROCLAMATION.

Anxious to give proofs of moderation & affection to my fellow citizens and countrymen, we have resolved to withdraw from the city of Coro the small number of troops which we had brought, in order to remove the fears which the fugitive commander of this district, and other agents of the Spanish government, have endeavored to instill into the minds of the inoffensive people, and particularly the women and children. The inhabitants may re-enter tranquilly their own respective dwellings without fear or suspicion. With this view we transfer our head quarters, to the shore, from whence we can equally afford the people of this country, without the least inconvenience, all the succour which they need.

The annexed letter, directed to the court and city council of this city, is a proof of our equitable intentions, and that it is not in the cities, but in the field, that we wish to fight with the oppressors alone of the Colombian people. If this people wish for any further proofs of the perfidy and infamy with which the Spanish government conduct themselves in all their transactions, let them pay a strict attention to the proclamation recently published by order of the captain general of Caracas, by which they offer considerable sums of money to any one who would boldly assassinate a citizen who purely and sincerely defends the rights of that same people. Despicable and atrocious tyrants! They have not even courage enough to look their enemies in the face!

We trust that those wise persons who have known and seen us act until now, will open the eyes of the rest of the citizens concerning their own respective interests, in order that, approaching nearer to my person, we might mutually concert the interests and felicity of our country, the only object of my wishes.

Done at head quarters at Coro, Aug. 7, 1806.

(Signed)

FRANCISCO DE MIRANDA.

To the court and city council of the city of Coro.

Honorable gentlemen of the court and common council,

This notification is directed to you in order to prevent in time the fatal consequences of an useless resistance from the civil and military authorities of the city, that we may conjointly, and as members of the Spanish American people, concert these indispensable measures to preserve the peace, union and happiness of our countrymen and friends.

I make no doubt but your prudence and patriotism will induce you to enter into a mutual accommodation, as useful as it will be honorable to both parties. Thus will the shedding of blood, and those disturbances which are the unavoidable consequences of war, be wholly prevented.

The count de Rouvray, commander in chief of the advanced posts of the army, is authorized to confer with you on this important business; to take possession of the city and to prevent all confusion or dispute with the civil and ecclesiastical authorities which are to remain in it, conformable to the enclosed proclamation.

Done at head quarters on board the squadron before Vela de Coro, August 3, 1806.

Signed,

FRANCISCO DE MIRANDA.

PROCLAMATION:

To the Inhabitants of Aruba.

If the present circumstances compel us to take possession of this island by force of arms, be assured that your persons, your property and your tranquility shall be inviolably protected. Obey your laws, respect your magistrates, in whose hands we shall rest all the civil authority; since we have already ascertained by experience that they are persons of probity. It is not our intention to make any alteration whatever in the government of the country.

Let your commerce continue as before, with the Isle of Curacao and other neutrals, provided it does not in any way tend to injure this expedition. Our principal object is the independence of the whole Colombian continent, for the comfort of all its inhabitants, and for the refuge of the human race. They alone who are the agents or accomplices of a government of assassins, are our enemies. The governor of Caracas, Voroncelos, together with the magistrates, have offered, by a decree, 30,000 dollars, and honors, to him who would assassinate a citizen of the country, who, through honorable means, defends the rights of his country; like the Prince of Orange, in Holland; Washington, in America, and Pelopidas and Dion in Greece. Let those hypocrites tell us which of the divine or human laws authorize such a decree? Do they wish to renew in these times, and among the Americans, the cruelties and infamies of the government of Philip II. in Holland, which have disgraced forever, his name and the nation which permitted them.

Done at Head-quarters, at Aruba, Aug. 19. h 1806.

(Signed)

MIRANDA.

PHILADELPHIA, October 24.

By our French papers it appears that Jerome Bonaparte arrived at Concarneau, and entered the Bay of the Forest on the 26th August in the Veteran. On the 15th August he fell in with the Quebec fleet, consisting of 16 sail, convoyed by two frigates, took 9 of them, valued at 5 millions, burnt them, and put the bands on board of American vessels. During a cruise of nine months, the fleet destroyed upwards of 200 English merchantmen.

A Paris paper mentions that on the 14th of August, an English fleet, under the command of lord St. Vincent, had entered the harbor of Lisbon and that the Spanish ambassador and the French charge des affaires had demanded of the cabinet of Lisbon an explanation of this unexpected event, and it was expected they would leave the city, if they did not receive a satisfactory answer.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.

It is with the sincerest pleasure that we announce to our fellow citizens, the arrival of Captain LEWIS, with his exploring party at St. Louis.

The president of the United States has received a letter from him dated at St. Louis, September 23, at which place himself, captain Clarke and their party arrived that day. They had passed the preceding winter at a place which he calls Fort Clatsop, near the mouth of the Columbia River. They set out from thence on the 27th of March last, and arrived at the foot of the Rocky Mountains, May 10, where they were detained until June 24, by the snows which rendered the passage over these mountains impracticable until then. He found it 2575 miles from the mouth of the Missouri to the great falls of that river, thence by land passing the Rocky Mountains to a navigable part of the Kootskoose 340 miles, of which two hundred would admit good road, and one hundred and forty miles over tremendous mountains which for sixty miles are covered with eternal snows, then seventy three miles down the Kootskoose into a south-eastwardly branch of the Columbia, one hundred and fifty four miles down that to the main river of the Columbia, and then four hundred and thirteen miles to the Pacific, in all three thousand five hundred and fifty five miles from the mouth of the Missouri to the mouth of the Columbia. In this last river the tide flows one hundred and eighty three miles, to within seven miles of its great rapids, and so far would admit large sloops; and from thence upwards may be navigated by batteaux and periaugers. He speaks of this whole line furnishing the most valuable furs in the world, and a short and direct course for them to the eastern coast of China; but that the greatest part of these would be from the head of the Missouri. He says it is fortunate he did not send back from the head of the Missouri any part of his force, consisting of thirty one men, as more than once they owed their lives and the fate of the expedition to their numbers. One man of his party had died before he reached fort Mandan in one thousand eight hundred and four, every other one is returned in good health.

Captain Lewis expected to remain at Saint Louis some days to settle with his men, and would then set out for Washington by the way of Vincennes, Louisville, Abington, Fincastle, Staunton and Charlottesville. He is accompanied by the Great Mandan chief, who is on a visit to Washington. Captain Lewis speaks of his colleague, captain Clarke in the most affectionate terms, and declares his equal title to whatever merit may be ascribed in the success of his enterprise.

A letter from a gentleman of respectability in the county of Attakapas, dated 6th instant, to a mercantile house of this city, states, that the colonel of the militia of that county, has received orders to draft 240 men, and that he had already proceeded to execute his orders. His excellency governor Claiborne was expected there the day the letter was dated.

(New Orleans Gazette.)

Extract of a letter from captain Olcott, late of the brig Nancy, of New York, bound from thence to Havana, dated Nassau, N. P. September 26th, 1806, to his owners in that city.

"GENTLEMEN, I am sorry to inform you of our misfortune. After leaving N. York, we experienced nothing material until the 13th, when we were brought too and boarded by the privateer sch'r Favorite, captain Barret, of New Providence, within one mile of the Berry Islands. After detaining me three hours, took all my letters and ship's papers, manned us with 6 men and ordered us for Providence. A few days after, it began to blow a hurricane, & continued till we went on shore, which was at about 6 o'clock on the 14th. When we first struck on the bank, I expected every soul would have been lost, but fortunately for us, we cut away both masts which eased her immediately, and the gale abated in a few hours after. The privateer which was in company hove over all her guns, cut away her foremast, and by that means weathered out the gale. Two days after she came to our assistance and landed part of our cargo on Stirups Key, together with myself, passengers and crew. She has not nor can she give any plausible reason for detaining me. I have entered my protest, and am taking legal steps to make them pay the damages I have suffered."

From the Boston Repository.

The editor of the Richmond Enquirer says:

"It is our most ardent hope that Mr. Jefferson will not recede from his resolution to retire from the presidential chair, unless some extraordinary crisis should occur. We are convinced that he will more securely consult his own unsullied reputation by such a display of disinterested patriotism!"

To be thus scared alive by a man's own partizans, is aggravated severity. If Mr. Jefferson had not long since happily exalted his feelings above the possibility of mortification, the thrusts he is now continually receiving from his late supporters would certainly be intolerable. To reach the quick of this poor victim, if any quick is to be found, his old friends, now his enemies, ingeniously waiters over the wounds they inflict, not with demerit, but a malicious solution called Irony, more caustic than the Lapis Infernalis.

THE SEA-FARING BACHELOR.

So long harass'd by winds and seas,
Tis time, at length to take your ease;
And seek a bride—for few can find
The sea a mistress to their mind.

In all your rounds, 'tis word'rous strange,
No far one tempts you to a change—
Madness it is, you must agree,
To lodge alone till forty-three.

Old Plato own'd, no blessing here
Could equal love—if but sincere;
And writings pen'd by Heaven, have shewn,
That man can ne'er be bless'd alone.

O'er life's meridian have you pass'd,
The night of death advances fast;
No props you plant for your decline,
No partner soothe these cares of thine.

If Neptune's self, who rul'd the main,
Kept sea Nymph's there to ease his pain;
Yourself who skim that empire o'er,
May safely keep one nymph on shore.

LUCINDA fair, in yonder grove,
Has so much beauty, so much love,
That on her lips the meanest fly
Is happier far than you or I.
